
X-Tools

Figured I'd post this here first.

X-Tools Grip-N-Weigh Pro

Two modes to choose from (Culling and normal). Culling mode weighs each fish caught and puts it in memory. It then calculates which fish weighs the least so it can be released. Normal mode shows the total weight of the fish caught and can store up to 99 fish in memory. Fishing scale includes a package of floats numbered 1-7 (for your assigned fish). Weighs up to 35 lbs

Paid $120 used 2 seasons, if somebody wants it for $60 let me know..

I agree. I went to the beam and 2 Bag-It brand bags. Who cares how much they weigh, when they're on the boat. You just want to get rid of your lightest one.

I know some of the guys use the Cullem right system and are pleased with it. It's just a little pricey.

You guys have fun with the beam!
I use the Cull Em Rite scale, and have been "Angler Of The Year" in 2007 as well as 2008!
You guys talk to me when you beat me! :woohoo: :laugh: :dry:

I kinda like that saying!!! When the weights are within an ounce or two, the beam IS the only way to go. I've weighed fish on scales three times and got different weights each time. All with and ounce or two, but I cannot afford to lose an ounce. The beam don't lie!

are you bagging each fish that you put on the beam ?

Yes. This way they don't wiggles around too much. And you don't have to poke a hole in them.

Here's the link

<http://www.bag-em.com/>

Don't get thier beam. It is plastic. get the aluminum one from BPS.
